

WU Polyomavirus in Respiratory Epithelial Cells from Lung Transplant Patient with Job Syndrome

Erica A. Siebrasse, Diana V. Pastrana, Nang L. Nguyen, Annie Wang, Mark J. Roth, Steven M. Holland, Alexandra F. Freeman, John McDyer, Christopher B. Buck, and David Wang

of a bronchoalveolar lavage (BAL) sample showed scattered cells, primarily columnar bronchial cells, with cytomorphologic changes reminiscent of BK polyomavirus (BKPyV)–infected decoy cells. The cells stained positive with PAb416, a monoclonal antibody against the SV40 large T antigen. The patient had BKPyV viremia (8.1×10^5 copies/mL) and